CITY COUNCIL STUMBLES IN SALARY CUTS

Councilman Hazelton Throws Monkey Wrench Into Cogs After Passage On First Reading----Mayor Jones Says Measure Is Direct Attack Upon Him---City Fines More Than Treble in Six Years---Gallery Applauds Address by City's Chief Executive----Horace Beavor Hissed When He Thought Ten Per Cent Cut Was Justified But Objected To Drastic Slash on Mayor's Salary---City Employes Make Pleas

The City Council failed last evening to jam salary ordinance down the people's throat r a suspension of the rules, through the age of Councilman Hazelton, who refused to party to the scheme. The real test came the first ordinance was read fixing the sal- of the stenographer to the mayor, and city tor at $900. It was moved and seconded that measure be passed under a suspension of the . All voted yes except Hazelton, who said " and President Hewitt then declared its reading. That was the beginning. Four times the same tactics were employed in g the salaries of the secretary of the civil ce commission, the director of public service, the street superintendent, and the police . Each time a motion was made to pass the ance under suspension of the rules and each Hazelton voted No.

Then seeing it was no use, the balance of the y ordinances were read and a motion made, ring their first reading.

Fines Take Jumps

915 the police fines amount $1,692.65. In 1919 they 538.89. In 1920 they had to $8,845.87, and thus year they amount to $13. That's real service, and ens are ready to pay the 0 a month. "Take my proposition, it does not make any difference to me for I shall do my work just the same, but it is an injustice to compare my work with my predecessors who put in but a few minutes a day on the job. I said I would be on the job, and I have been. I believe the city should have a mayor that every one knows who he is. There are a lot of things that come before him that the public does not know about. Regarding the cutting of my salary, you do as you please, but you are putting the office on a plan so that no one but a man of money would want the position. A poor man could not afford to take it and devote his whole time to it as I do. You forget that when I came in I abolished the office of safety director, thereby saving the city $700 a year. You don't know that the mayor no longer gets fees in State cases, and thereby the city profits about $200 a year which the mayor loses. I never pass the buck to the other fellow, and I am not doing it now. If you have an ax to grind, give it to the mayor, but not to the rest of the men. I think you are going them an injustice. The police and firemen have done good work. Some of them have made mistakes but their record is one of the best in the State. My office is the only elective one touched by the salary ordinance, and it is done because some one has an ax to grind. Do as you please with me, but I am asking for you to let the new council handle the matter, and don't do anything on the men that later you will be sorry for. Let the community have a say as to whether they approve of such a measure or not."

The remarks of the mayor punctuated with applause from the lobby, showing conclusively that they were with him. He was followed by George H. Chamberlain.

Give Council Advice

Mr. Chamberlain said he wanted to make a few observations. He knew the members of the council and believed they would finally settle the question according to their best judgment. They had taken an oath to perform their duties faithfully, honestly and impartially, there were a good many things that it did not pay to do. You men are soon going out of office and you don't want to do anything you will be sorry for later. I am not concerned about Mayor Jones as an individual. He won't starve if he don't get $3,000 a year. But does it comport with the dignity of the office to pay him less than his service director that he appoints? Lorain pays her mayor $3500 a year, but they have a police court that he does not run while our mayor takes care of his own work. He has assessed the fines given. He could ease up on the fines enough to make the difference in his salary. The people are not expecting or asking for a reduction. No petition has been filed or no person has appeared before the council asking them to reduce salaries. I honor the mayor for his loyalty to the police and firemen. Is it fair that they should have a reduction. We go to rest at night in security for we know they are on the job protecting us. For a long time we didn't pay them what we ought to, and it's unfair now to reduce them. There is an abundance of time to consider it when prices have been reduced. I am asking you to lay aside any feeling you may have, and later you will have the knowledge you have done the right thing.

Against Mayor's Cut

Horace Beavor took the floor. He said he believed they had cut the salary of the mayor too much, but he regarded the balance of the cuts fair and just. Take the carpenters or any other craft and they haven't had a chance to earn $1440 a year, for there has been but little work, while the police and firemen work 365 days a year. The city officials were not afraid to cut the laboring men on the streets who were the last that ought to be cut, for they had to live the same as the police and firemen. The carpenters had taken their cut and have had little to do since. The steel plant has made a 75 per cent cut. I believe you have too many officers anyhow. Rose Moriarty filled the position in the auditor's office with a hired helper, and it was a busy place at that time. He believed in a living wage, but thought the ten per cent cut was justified.

Beavor was hissed by some of the men in the lobby, while making his speech. President Hewitt said if there was any more hissing he would adjourn the meeting.

Attorney Hamlin called the attention of the council to the fact that Beavor and his craft got a raise long before the police or firemen did. The carpenter's got more than double what they got before, and every man here knows it. When you let the police and firemen get theirs as long as the carpenters did

COUNCIL FINANCE CHAIRMAN STUMPED ON CITY AFFAIRS

Councilman Andrus, chairman of the council finance committee showed his familiarity with the mayor's office last night when he asked who the mayor's clerk was. He was told it was Grant Schrock.

"I thought he worked in the water works office," said Andrus.

There was a broad smile ran through the lobby as every man there knew that Schrock was police clerk.

INVITE PUBLIC TO OPEN FORUM

The first open forum meeting of the season will be held this evening at Machinist's hall under the direction of the Lincoln Club. Attorney Blythin, of Cleveland, with the Welsh singers will be the attraction. Both men and women are urged to be present as the meetings are free and open to discussion.

ELYRIA PASTOR PRAISES THE CHRONICLE-TELEGRAM

Rev. Paul Bourquin, pastor of Paul's Evangelical church, took occasion from the pulpit to a crowded church to tell his congregation of the co-operation which the Chronicle-Telegram gives to the churches of the city.

"I have never been in any city and have never come in contact with any newspaper before which stands so ready to co-operate with the churches as does the Chronicle-Telegram," Mr. Bourquin informed his congregation

The Jubilee service at the St. Paul's church last night was well attended by members of all the city churches. Cordial greetings and hearty congratulations were extended by the members of the Ministerial Association to St. Paul's church, celebrating its 50th birthday. The music by the solo singers, St. Paul's choir, and the orchestra of Second Congregational S. S. was exceptionally fine.

Rev. J. H. Grant was the first speaker. In his eloquent manner he brought the greetings of the First Congregational church to St Paul's, commending it for the spirit of fellowship shown toward the other Elyria churches.

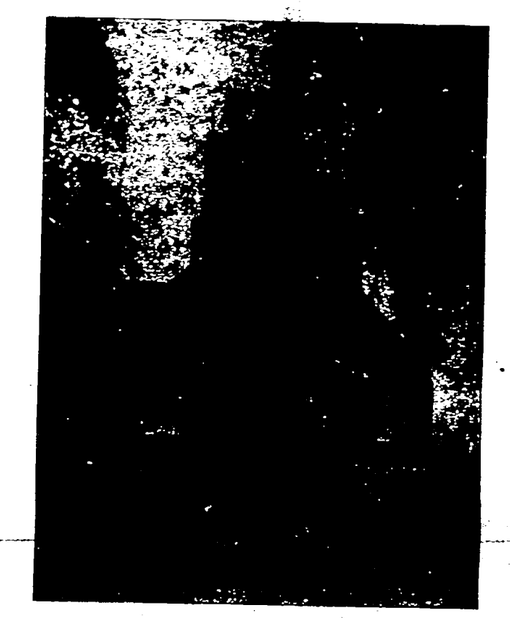

Then Rev. Kerby, the new pastor of the Methodist church, was introduced by Rev. Bourquin, and also welcomed in to the membership of the Elyria Ministerial Association. He said, when he arrived in Elyria, an enemy came, an enemy of sin and unrighteousness in its various forms. He came to do his share to make Elyria a safer place for young men and young women to grow in grace and develop Christian character.

He was followed by Rev. W. S. Smith, of the United Presbyterian church. He said, while not the youngest preacher of Elyria, he came from the youngest church of Elyria, the U. P. church being only fifteen years old. What is it that built the church? Not only the example, and teachings of Jesus Christ, but the power of the Holy Spirit, which came to the disciples of Christ on the first day of Pentecost, and still mightily works in the Christian church. May St. Paul's have this Spirit abundantly and through it become a wonderful power, for the moral and spiritual welfare of this community.

The Rev. W. L. Burner, of the Church of Christ, added his good wishes to St. Paul's. He commended St. Paul's, for belonging to a church denomination, which was brought into existence after the Reformation, by trying to unite.

The last speaker was Rev. Wm. Flammer of the Second Congregational church. He said: how wonderfully we have advanced in Christian fellowship. Fifty years hence it would have utterly been impossible to have a Union service like this, in which people from all the churches of the city and their pastors came together as one body in good fellowship. May God speed the day when the denominational differences will be put aside, and all have one burning passion to bring people into closer fellowship with Christ.

On behalf of St. Paul's congregation, Rev. P. Bourquin thanked the pastors, the singers, the members of the orchestra and all visitors, for what they had done to make the gathering so interesting and helpful.

SUMMON "STRIKE" LEADERS

Federal Government Makes First Move To Avert Nation-Wide Strike of Railroaders---Conference Called for Thursday At Chicago---Government Keeps Proposals To Be Submitted Secret ---Cabinet Considers Grave Situation---Union Railroad Leaders Continue to Work on Plans for Big Tie-Up In November

With leaders of the railway brotherhoods stating "peace with honor will be welcomed," the first important open move by the Federal government to avert a nation-wide railway strike was made today. The Railway Labor Board, whose authority was assailed by the strike threat, today summoned the heads of the four railway brotherhoods to meet with it at Chicago Thursday afternoon. The invitation was extended after two members of the board conferred with President Harding and other officials at Washington.

The nature of proposals to be submitted to the brotherhood chieftains was unknown to Warren S. Stone, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who accepted the invitation with alacrity.

Meanwhile, the strike situation, involving upwards of 2,000,000 railway workers and affecting every important railway in the country, was considered by President Harding and the cabinet. It was reported from Washington that the President will be urged to name a board of conciliation to deal with the proposed walkout, scheduled to start October 30. Secretary of Labor Davis, who has canvassed the dispute thoroughly with the Railway Labor Board was to explain the situation to the Cabinet. As a last resort, it was believed President Harding himself would step in to avert a national strike.

A third group of important railways, upon which the walkout will become effective November 3, was published by President Stone and other union leaders, but they refused to deny or affirm the correctness of the list.

Whether the Pennsylvania System was included in the fourth group comprising "all other railways," likewise remained a mystery.

W. G. Lee, head of the Railway Trainmen's Brotherhood, voiced the stand of the brotherhood workers by declaring threatened wage cuts imperiled their standard of living, attained after long sacrifice and that the men would not work unless assured there would be an end to wage cuts.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The administration will seek to enforce all decisions of the Railroad Labor Board as its first step toward averting a nation-wide railroad strike, it was officially stated at the White House this afternoon.

The administration believes that all parties which have violated decisions of the board, both employers and employees, must be called to account for their violations immediately.

SUMMON RAIL CHIEFS FOR BIG CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The summoning the heads of the railway brotherhoods to Chicago for a conference with members of the railway labor board was regarded in Washington today as the first step in "getting together" to avert the threatened nation wide railroad strike.

News that the brotherhood chiefs had been invited to go to Chicago came to Washington just as the cabinet was assembling at the White House for its first meeting since the strike began to assume menacing proportions. It was taken as a hopeful sign by the members of the cabinet.

CABINET TAKES UP FIRST BIG PROBLEM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The cabinet met today to consider the first national crisis with which it has been confronted since it was formed eight months ago.

Comment on the railroad strike situation as the cabinet members went into conference were as follows:

Attorney General Daugherty: "I think the situation will improve every day. I consider it improper at this time to discuss any phase of the strike situation. The department of justice will have nothing to say unless it becomes necessary to act."

SEE POSSIBILITIES TIE-UP SETTLEMENT

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—The sun of possible compromise shone through the cloud of the railroad strike situation for the first time this morning. Indications were that events were moving toward adjustments that would avert the nation wide tie up of rail traffic scheduled to begin on October 30.

Among the foremost of these indications was the expected arrival here today of R. M. Barton, chairman of the U. S. Railway Labor Board, together with other members of the public group of the board fresh from conferences with President Harding and other high government officials in Washington.

Members of the United States Railway Labor board who are in Chicago, went into conference shortly after 10 o'clock today. It was announced that the conference would remain in session until noon. No promise of a statement at that hour was made. Chairman Barton and Ben W. Hooper, members of the public group, had not arrived back from Washington when the conference convened.

FIGHTING FOR EXISTENCE SAYS WARREN S. STONE

CLEVELAND, Oct. 18—"We are fighting for our existence, Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the brotherhood of locomotive engineers told to the I. N. S. today in discussing the nation wide rail strike called to begin October 30.

"The present contest is but the culmination of many years of struggle. Railway executives wanted a strike in 1916, which was only averted by the passage of the Adamson law, providing a basic eight hour day for railway employes. It is not fundamentally a question of wage reduction that has brought on the present crisis. The real issues are the rules and working conditions under which our members do their work, and which have been secured only after years of constant struggle.

CIGARETTES INVOLVED IN COMMISSION SUIT

The question as to how much discount should be given on the sale of one million cigarets is the cause of a suit now on trial before a jury in Court Room No. 1. C. Hageman is suing Kline Bros. Co. of Lorain for $2,388.53 which he claims is due him but Kline Bros. are claiming more discount than he is willing to give.

CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY OF CONVERSION OF CHAS. G. FINNEY OBSERVED AT OBERLIN CHURCH

Dr. Nicholas Van der Pyl Pays Befitting Tribute To Achievement of Oberlin College's Second President in Brilliant Sermon

OBERLIN, Oct. 18.—Reverend Nicholas Van der Pyl gave as his Sunday morning sermon an address on President Charles G. Finney in memory of the hundredth anniversary if his conversion. He used as his text the words: "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever." Dan. 12:3. The address follows:

"One hundred years ago this month, Charles G. Finney was converted, and began that career which will make him for all time one of the great outstanding figures of American Christianity. We here in Oberlin have an especial interest in President Finney because of his relation to the educational and religious life of our community. He had an international reputation, the influence of his personality was felt in the religious life of America and Europe but it was here that he felt his primary work to be. He had come here, he tells us in his autobiography, for the sake of the students, to secure their conversion and sanctification; and it was only because there was so great a number of them, which gave him an opportunity to work on young minds in the process of education, that he remained here from year to year. His heart strongly urged him to give up his whole time to the work of an evangelist, but he reasoned he could do more good here than anywhere else. It was Finney who has given this community and college its international reputation and its cosmopolitan character. There is no other college in this country, with the possible exception of Yale, which draws its students from a wider geographical area than Oberlin. David Livingstone, the great African missionaary and explorer, sent his first quarter's salary to a young brother in Scotland, urging him to go to Oberlin. He went, and was graduated here in 1845. For forty years, as teacher, as president of the college, and as pastor [illegible] Church, he built his life into this community and into the lives of the students.

"It is naturally impossible within my time limit to give any comprehensive survey of his life and influence. I shall feel satisfied if I can make him stand out for you as a vital personality of his time, and amid conditions long since past, never to return.

Many Hardships

"The times in which President Finney lived were hard times for religion. Notwithstanding the reference to the good old days when everybody was supposed to go to church, and homes were all pious, there was no evidence in those days that these conditions did exist. In New England, an arid orthodoxy, ending in a negative Unitarianism, had reduced vital religion to an almost minus quantity. Lyman Beecher has left us an account of the deplorable religious conditions at Yale in the beginning of the nineteenth century. Scarcely any of the students were professors of religion; most of them were 'scoffers and infidels,' to use the terms much in vogue in these days. New York state was undeveloped country. The Erie Canal, which before the coming of the railroad was the most approved means of communication between the Hudson River and the outpost of Buffalo, had just begun to operate when Finney was doing his evangelistic work in Central New York. A religion, largely doctrinal and metaphysical, and knowing little of social relationships, pervaded the churches. In every community there was a general protest against that type of religion. There was an unreality about it which drove the best minds, if not the best hearts, into violent opposition. It harked back to Michael Wigglesworth, whose "Day of Doom" was the popular seller of those earlier days. Hell was a reality. It was fiery and endless for the unconverted. Lowell, with a fine sarcasm, says of this book that it was the "solace of every fireside," the flicker of pine knots by which it was conned perhaps adding a lively relish to its premonitions of eternal combustion." I have known men in New England who listened to their grandfathers singing with an inspiring melody this stanza of one of the popular hyms of that day:

"My thoughts on awful subjects roll,
Damnation and the dead.
What horrors seize a guilty soul
Upon a dying bed."

And the only guilt of which these horrified souls were conscious was the rejection of a system of religion which made man a helpless and hopeless creature in the grip of a God whose decrees of election had been framed in the counsels of eternity long before the man was born. Jonathan Edwards, with a logic that was shivered to splinters on the rocks of experience, had urged men to flee from the wrath of God, when his theology specifically stipulated that he could not flee from it. It was one of those paradoes in which the head and heart were in insoluble conflict, the popular version of which was well expressed in those lines attributed to an eccentric character named Lorenzo Dow:

"You can and you can't,
You will and you won't,
You'll be damned if you do,
You'll be damned if you don't.

It was against the background of a century or more of teaching and influence like that that we must consider both the conversion of Finney and his almost uncanny power over men and women. His conversion was of that internally explosive type which was not uncommon in his day. His parents were not professors of religion. They were doubtless of the type, very numerous in New England when he was born, for whom religion and life seemed unrelated. In his autobiography he makes little allusion to his parents, except to state that they were not professors of religion. In the region of Western New York, where the young Finney lived at the time of his conversion, there existed a psychological distemper, which expressed itself in a variety of strange vagaries. It was in this region that the violent opposition to Free Masonry was born, and Finney came under its influence. In this region the Vermont farmer, William Miller, in the early thirties, began to preach the second coming of Christ which developed into a veritable epidemic. Men and women left their employment, disposed of their property, and in robes of white, neither eating nor sleeping, they awaited in vain the coming of the bridegroom. The results were mental and physical exhaustion and, in many cases, the horrors of insanity. Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism, began his career in this region. The Fox sisters, founders of spiritualism, heard their "Rochester rappings" in this region, and started that delusion which spread over the world.

Against much of this spirit the work and the thinking of Mr. Finney was a protest, but his own conversion and his revival influence was colored by it. So far as I can learn from his own autobiography, Finney's sinfulness was of the same character as that which John Bunyan charged himself in his confession, "Grace Abounding to the Worst of Sinners." He may have loved sport; he may have been lacking in serious purpose, he may have refused to believe the Bible as it was then interpreted. But apparently there was nothing of that heinous transgression which naturally results in the pangs of a horrible remorse. Like most men and women in his day, he was highly introspective, and the inner conflict, resulting at last in his conversion, was what might have been expected in a man of his type. He felt he was about to die, and he knew that if he died, he would sink down to hell. Like Bunyan, he heard voices and it was only when he was willing to admit that he had no righteousness of his own and submitted himself to the righteousness of God thru Christ, that he found his peace and his salvation.

This sounds somewhat strange to modern ears. But that was conversion in those days; and it must be said to the credit of Mr. Finney, that the neurotic symptoms which were marked in his conversion, and which played so important a part in his early evangelistic work, were neutralized in himself by a thoroughly intellectual grip of things and by a strong and well balanced personality. A man of so strong a personality, such keenness of reasoning powers, flinging himself with conviction against weaker personalities, set over against a background of fear and superstition, could not but have a powerful influence over them. This explains the swoonings and the [illegible]ings superinduced by his preaching. His autobiography contains many instances of men and women who were rendered speechless and unconscious by the sweep of his emotions.

Dramatic Conversions

The art by which it was accomplished was not conscious, but psychologically it can be easily explained. He was preaching at Evans Mills. The people seemed to enjoy his preaching, but were not moved to conversion by it. One night he determined to compel decision. He asked those who would become Christians to rise up and those who would not to sit still. They all sat still. Then he looked at them for a few moments, with those eyes, as some one has said, which seemed to see the inner workings of a man's heart, and said, "Then you are committed. You have taken your stand. You have rejected Christ and his gospel. This is explicit, and you may remember as long as you live, that you have thus publicly committed yourselves against the Saviour, and said, 'We will not have this man, Christ Jesus, to reign over us.'" The effect was tremendous. His words haunted the people. They could not get away from these words, and those eyes. With the background of fear in their lives he was irresistable when he spoke to them the following night. "If I had a sword in my hand," he said at another time, under similar conditions, I could not have cut them down as fast as they fell."

"At one time he was holding meetings in Utica. On a certain morning, he was being conducted thru one of the textile mills, he noted that the girls at the looms were much agitated. He moved slowly toward them. He saw their hands trembling. When he came within eight or ten feet from them, he looked solemnly at them, and without the utterance of a word, they all burst into tears. The owner immediately ordered all the machinery stopped. A meeting was held, and nearly every girl in the mill professed conversion.

"Hard on Sinners"

The vividness of his description, hardly less effective than that of Jonathan Edwards before him, was moving in the extreme. Without ceasing, he hammered away at the sense of fear, until men broke down. He would not comfort the sinner. To do so was to inflict upon the sinner an injury as cruel as the grave, as cruel as hell, for it would send the sinner headlong into the abyss of everlasting fire. His sermon on the text, "The Wages of sin is Death," described the place of punishment as a bottomless pit upon whose wall were written "Wages," "Wages," that the condemned might be reminded thru all eternity of their rejection of Christ.

It is interesting to know what was the content of a message which was heard with such interest and exerted so powerful an influence all over this country and in Europe. In the early years it was not clearly defined. His preaching, so far as I have been able to judge from the reading of a few of his sermons, was aimed at the will and the conscience to draw out immediate decision. It is not always clear to what he would convert his hearers: altho there are those who have told us that his converts changed their habits radically after their conversion, and that much of the religious character of the city of Rochester, which has persisted thru the years may be directly attributed to the work of Finney, over two generations ago. It is quite evident, however, that the general conception of his age was that conversion meant getting right with God, whatever that might mean, and that the effects of conversion upon character and social relations was little thought about. His work of teaching here in Oberlin made it necessary for him to frame a definite system, and undoubtedly the content of that system lay unconsciously in his mind in his early evangeliane labors.

Had Sane System

"That system, on the whole, was very sane, and marked a distinct advance upon that which was generally held by the New England theologians of his day. I would like to remind those who may balk at the present Oberlin theology that Finney was considered to be a very dangerous man in his day. Over against the doctrine of total depravity which made it impossible for a man to choose God, he held to a doctrine of ability to choose. His doctrine of sanctification, which by some of his followers was carried to an unwarranted perfection even to the point of becoming a public scandal is perfectly clear. Sanctification was nothing more or less than obedience to God's law, and it lies clearly within the province of man's ability.

By obedience to God's law he means simply an attitude of good will to all being. The inevitable consequences in a life thus sanctified is a Christian who is not only right with God, but also right in his social relationships with his fellow man.

There was a vitality about his system in marked contrast with that of the Westminster confession for which he had very little use. He could not put the spirit in a straight jacket, nor would be degenerate man into a helpless puppet to be manipulated by a power outside himself. For him God was coverign, but man was free. That was a new note for his day, and the conservatives of his time had many misgivings as to his orthodoxy. We only need to put the systematic theology that was taught here by Finney and Fairchild over against that of the New England and the Princeton Schools to see the wide differences between it and that system which, tho it still survives, is either held with neutralizing reservations, or in the breach rather than the performance.

"It is no reflection upon Finney to say that he did not follow the logic of his system. He lived in a much narrower world. Evolution was still to find Darwin, its natural historian. Biblical criticism was practically unknown in his day. The social content of the gospel had not yet been discovered. Religion was still a department of life, with a sharp line dividing things sacred and secular. Religion was not conceived of in terms of life, with an out reach into the market place, into legislative halls, and into the chancelleries of empire. It was still individualistic, with heaven for a destination, and the celestial places for its most approved expression and practice. But his native common sense was always with Finney. A lawyer in Rochester came to him at one time and said, "Mr. Finney, I want you to prove to me that the Bible is true." We know that Mr. Finney held to the common belief of the day concerning the inerrancy of all Scripture, but whether his keen intellectual perception was such that he could not give a convincing answer directly to the question or whether he believed that the Bible becomes authority only thru the individual experience of men, his reply was exceedingly suggestive. He asked his inquirer if he believed in the existence of God, if he believed that he had treated God as he ought, if he respected his authority, if he loved and obeyed him; according to the best light he had. To all this he answered, yes. "Why should I give you further information when you do not live up to the light you have," answered Finney. "When you do all these things, I will try to show you that the Bible is from God."

Salvation o' Souls

For the same reason Finney was much more concerned with the salvation of individual souls than he was in the growth of the kingdom. It was not a matter of indifference, but of emphasis. After preaching for nine months in London, he was written up by the pastor of the church for whom he preached. He said of Finney, "Altho he has now preached three months in this great house, the hearer would scarcely have ever discovered that there was either a church or pastor, or officers or schools, or sickness or death, or any species of local labor requiring either sympathy or prayer that there was a nation with its manifold wants a senate, or a sovereign So it is as to the world, the cause of missions, and so forth." How strange such prayers and sermons would sound today in a world which has become an interrelating neighborhood.

And yet r. Finney was not indifferent to these things. Prof. Wright before his death told me how at one Thanksgiving service, Mr. Finney arose in the testimony meeting which still follows our annual Thanksgiving address, with tears sought forgivness from God for not having taken a more active interest in the anti-slavery movement. We know that he would not come to Oberlin until the trustees had voted to open the doors of the college to people of color, and we know that he was so incensed at the attitude of the trustees of Lane Seminary in forbidding free discussion on the slavery question that he came to Oberlin with the understanding that the trustees should never be permitted to interfere with the internal regulation of the school, but should leave that entirely to the discretion of the faculty. Those two matters of policy have become the peculiar traditions of Oberlin, and are still its finest heritage. It has been at once its glory and its strength and has inspired a reverence and a respect for Oberlin which is her fame around the world.

"God's Ambassador"

This, in brief, was the man, his message, and his times. More should be spoken to do him ample justice. He was God's accredited ambassador, with a passion for souls, with a kindly spirit above that of the theologians of his day. This was the place he loved most. It was a source of grief to him when he saw the growth of social life in the college making it increasingly difficult to have his annual revival among the students. But I think if he were living today, he would see that while the methods of his day have passed, the newer methods of building up the spiritual life of today, are quite, if not more effective than those of the earlier days. We do well, therefore, to recall his spiritual birth, for there we shall mark the beginnings of an influence which can never die.

Blind 40 Years, May Regain Sight

Treatments by which he hopes to regain his eyesight have been undergone in Washington by former [illegible]homas P. Gore, of Oklahoma, for more than a month, with Dr Samuel J. Harris, the Boston eye specialist, directing the educational and electrotherapeutic courses the patient has been taking. Recently Mr. Gore, blind for forty years, has been able to distinguish sunlight from darkness. Mr. Gore was blinded by an accident when eleven years old.

City Council Minor Business

The city council conducted the following minor items of business last night.

A petition was received to remove a sign in the parking near the corner of Cleveland and East Bridge streets.

The Elyria Land Sales Co. asked for sewer connections in the Overland Garden allotment. They are to build the sewer themselves but want an outlet.

Chief Stankard asked for an appropriation of $250 for an extra plainclothes man until the first of the year. He stated that one was now working and had done good work. It was referred to the finance committee.

The green line will be given a lease on the present waiting room for one year only. The council do not wish to lease it for a period of years as it may become necessary to make changes there if the city grows.

The service director was instructed to put in a water main on Caldwell street, and the ordinance was passed to that effect.

An ordinance was also passed accepting the annexing of 25.25 acres of land on the Oberlin road west of the car barns.

City Council

I will consent to a cut, but not before. They were on the job at $93.33 a month during the war, and should be given a chance to pay off their debts contracted then, when the carpenters were getting big money.

Beavor disputed some of Hamlin's statements saying that they got two raises of 5c an hour. Hamlin asked him how much an hour he was getting now and he said 90c but there was no work.

Get No Overtime

Chief Bates of the Fire Department spoke for his men, saying they got no overtime, and worked steadily. Their record was good. The money they got was quickly paid back to the merchants. They were slow in getting a raise, and the city should be slow in reducing them.

Fireman Waldron then spoke and handed a bouquet to Chief Bates praising him for his efficient service and for the well trained department he had made. He thought a reduction would result in a loss of moraie in the department.

Patrolman Southam asked the council to be fair, and to take into consideration the fact that the police and firemen were not boys or old men, but that they did have families to support. They could not get pay for overtime, but nevertheless did a great deal of extra work that had brought thousands of dollars in fines to the city treasury. We will keep up that record, no matter what happens, he said.

Councilman Stark Absent

City Engineer Powell put a plea for his assistant, saying he was competent and was doing the work of two men. If reduced some other place would grab him, and the city would be the loser.

In justice to Councilman Stark, it should be stated that he was unable to be present, but it is understood that he is not fully in accord with the balance of the council, and will be heard from later.

WEST VIRGINIA MINE INJUNCTION SUIT DELAYED

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Oct. 17.—The injunction hearing against United Mine Workers to restrain [illegible]ginia, has been postponed until October 28th, by the federal court at Indianapolis, according to coal operators who returned to the city today.

A similar hearing set for October 21 at Bluefield, will be heard at a later date in federal court at Charleston.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and Frank Keeney, and Fred Mooney, officials of district 17, have been summoned. Kenney and Mooney are in jail in Mingo county charged with murder.

OBERLIN

ADDRESS BY PROFESSOR MACK ON EDUCATION

OBERLIN, Oct. 18.—The Men's Brotherhood of the First M. E. church held their regular monthly business meeting and banquet Monday evening in the parlors of the church. An excellent supper was served by the ladies of the church. The meeting was well attended.

After the banquet Professor Mack of the College gave a very interesting address on the trend of modern education, and criticised the modern tendency to specialize. He called attention to the fact that we have vocational experts who presume to choose the vocation for a child almost before he has left the grades, and the modern tendency is to have him specialize from that time on. Professor Mack feels that this tendency will have the effect of making men more narrow and that the general education is still needed to broaden men's mind and give them a wider field of interest and of influence; that what the world needs today is not narrow men but broad men sharpened to a point. The speaker admitted that the course he suggested would not give the man more dollars but would give him more of life, and that too much emphasis is now being placed on the material things. A very interesting discussion followed his address.

At the meeting a month ago Professor Geist spoke on World Disarmament, and this also proved to be a very interesting and instructive evening, and the men of the church are looking forward with interest to many more such interesting and instructive evenings during the coming season.

When Mr. Jones was saved from the frying pan—

They talk yet of the change that came over Jones. Some said it was psychology. Some said it was a miracle. All said it was a mystery.

When they asked Jones, he said it was liberation from slavery—slavery to the frying pan, and to grease and starch.

Jones used to take his breakfast fried, and followed this with a heavy lunch.

In those days they said at the office: "Old Jones has a secret sorrow and he's sore on the world."

One day Jones started late—no time for the usual breakfast to be cooked.

Jones had a breakfast on Grape-Nuts with good cream. He was delighted with the crispness and rich flavor. Felt satisfied and "fed." Tried it again at lunch. Kept on breakfasting that way—often lunching, too.

Jones began to "perk up," talk up, step up—GET up.

"Let Jones show you how to do this," they began to say at the office.

As to Jones—he said: "That's a great food—GRAPE-NUTS."

There are thousands of Joneses, both kinds—reckless feeders and wise feeders.

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

—the perfected goodness of whole wheat and malted barley—delicious, nourishing, ready to eat. All grocers.

Elyria Firemen Send Lorain Defi

The Elyria firemen have challenged the Lorain firemen to a game of horse shoes for some date to be settled on soon. The games will either be played at Cascade park or Municipal park at Lorain.

The Elyria firemen have developed some classy tossers and it is presumed Lorain also has some stars, so that a contest between the two will be of considerable interest.

ARCOLA WEEK

An Invitation to the Ladies especially

Many Heating Engineers are keeping their stores open evenings and invite you to come in and meet ARCOLA

THIS WEEK is ARCOLA Week and the Heating Engineers are keeping open house. Many will keep their stores open evenings for you.

They invite you to come in and meet ARCOLA, the wonderful new hot-water heating outfit which warms a whole house with its single fire, taking the place of several stoves and paying for itself in the fuel it saves.

If you don't know where your Heating Engineer's store is, pick up the classified telephone directory and look under "Heating Contractors" or "Steamfitters" or "Plumbers." Pick out the name and address nearest your home.

And decide now to accept this invitation; it may mean a saving of $25 on this winter's fuel bill: or even more than that!

For ARCOLA—built by the same company whose larger heating plants are installed in mansions, cathedrals and even the White House itself—is guaranteed to do these five things:

1—Connected with American Radiators, it fills the whole house with healthful hot-water warmth.
2—It takes the place of several stuffy stoves, and pays for itself in the fuel it saves. In that sense it is really a gift.
3—It can be connected to the kitchen tank, too, giving an abundance of hot water for washing and bathing.
4—It can be installed immediately without the slightest disturbance to the family.
5—It adds from three to five times its cost to the selling value of your house—just as IDEAL Boilers and larger AMERICAN Radiator systems add far more than their cost to the value of larger buildings.

ARCOLA is unlike any heating plant you have ever seen. It is an entirely new invention developed after years of experiment in the largest thermal research laboratories in the United States.

Don't try to imagine what it is until you have seen it. But for the sake of your comfort—and your children's comfort and health especially — accept your Heating Engineer's invitation.

One-third of your fuel bill is worth saving. See ARCOLA any day or evening this week.

This red and yellow card at the right is the sign of a Heating or Sanitary Engineer (you used to call him Steamfitter or Plumber) who can show you ARCOLA. Look for it in his window.

It will pay you to consult him twice a year as you do your Doctor or Dentist. To have him examine and report on your heating and plumbing costs little. It may save you a very great deal.

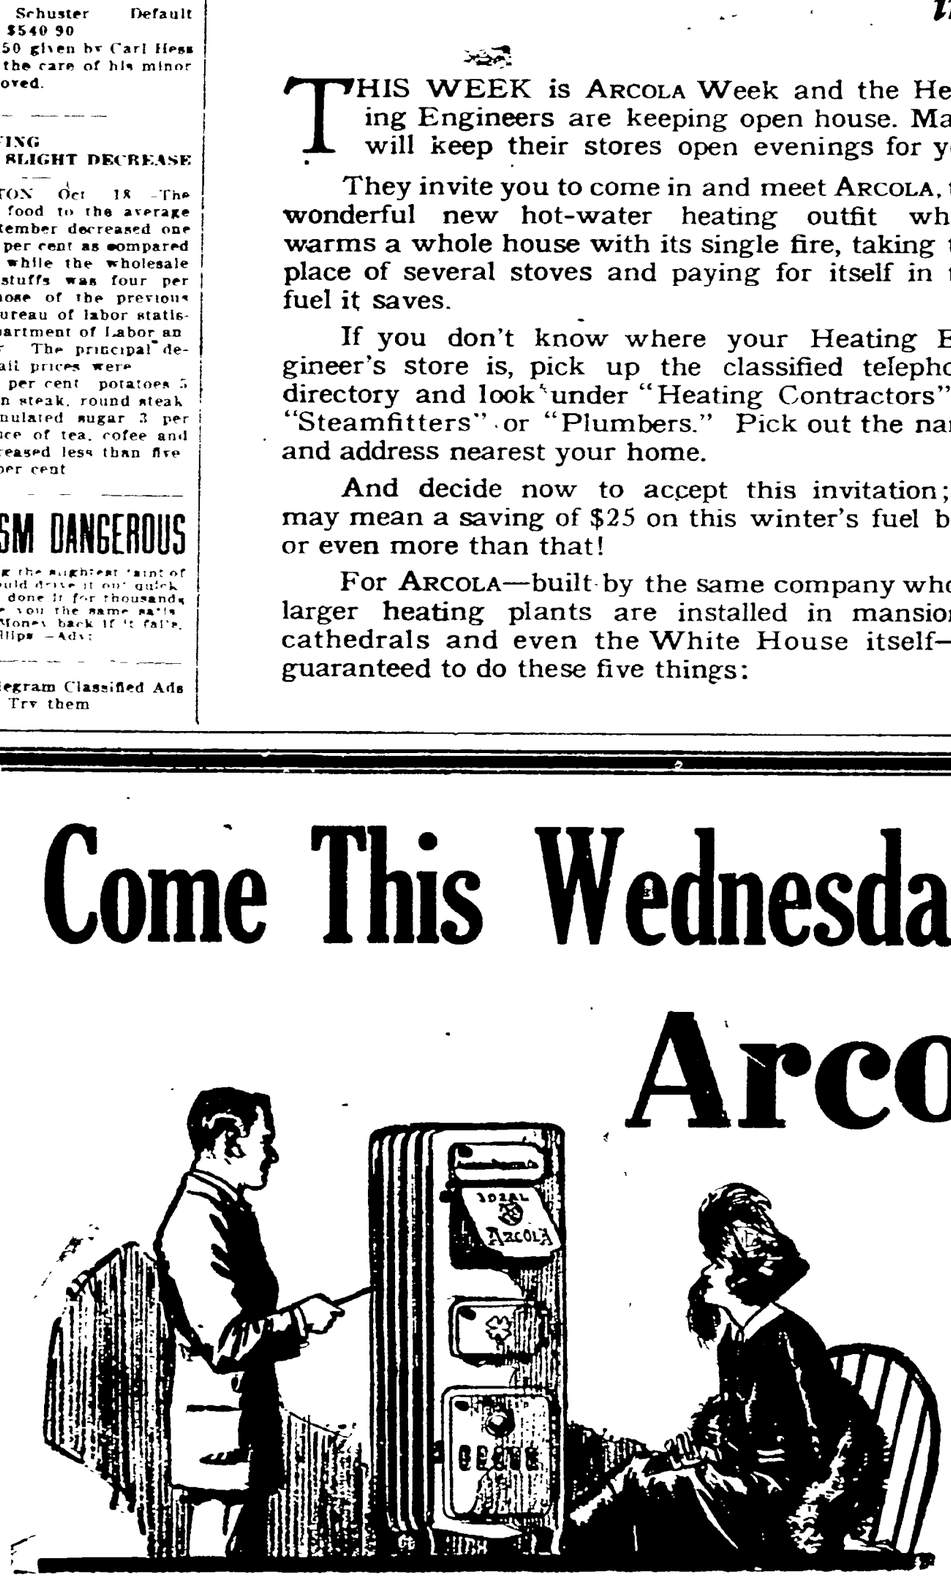

AMERICAN RADIATOR COMPANY

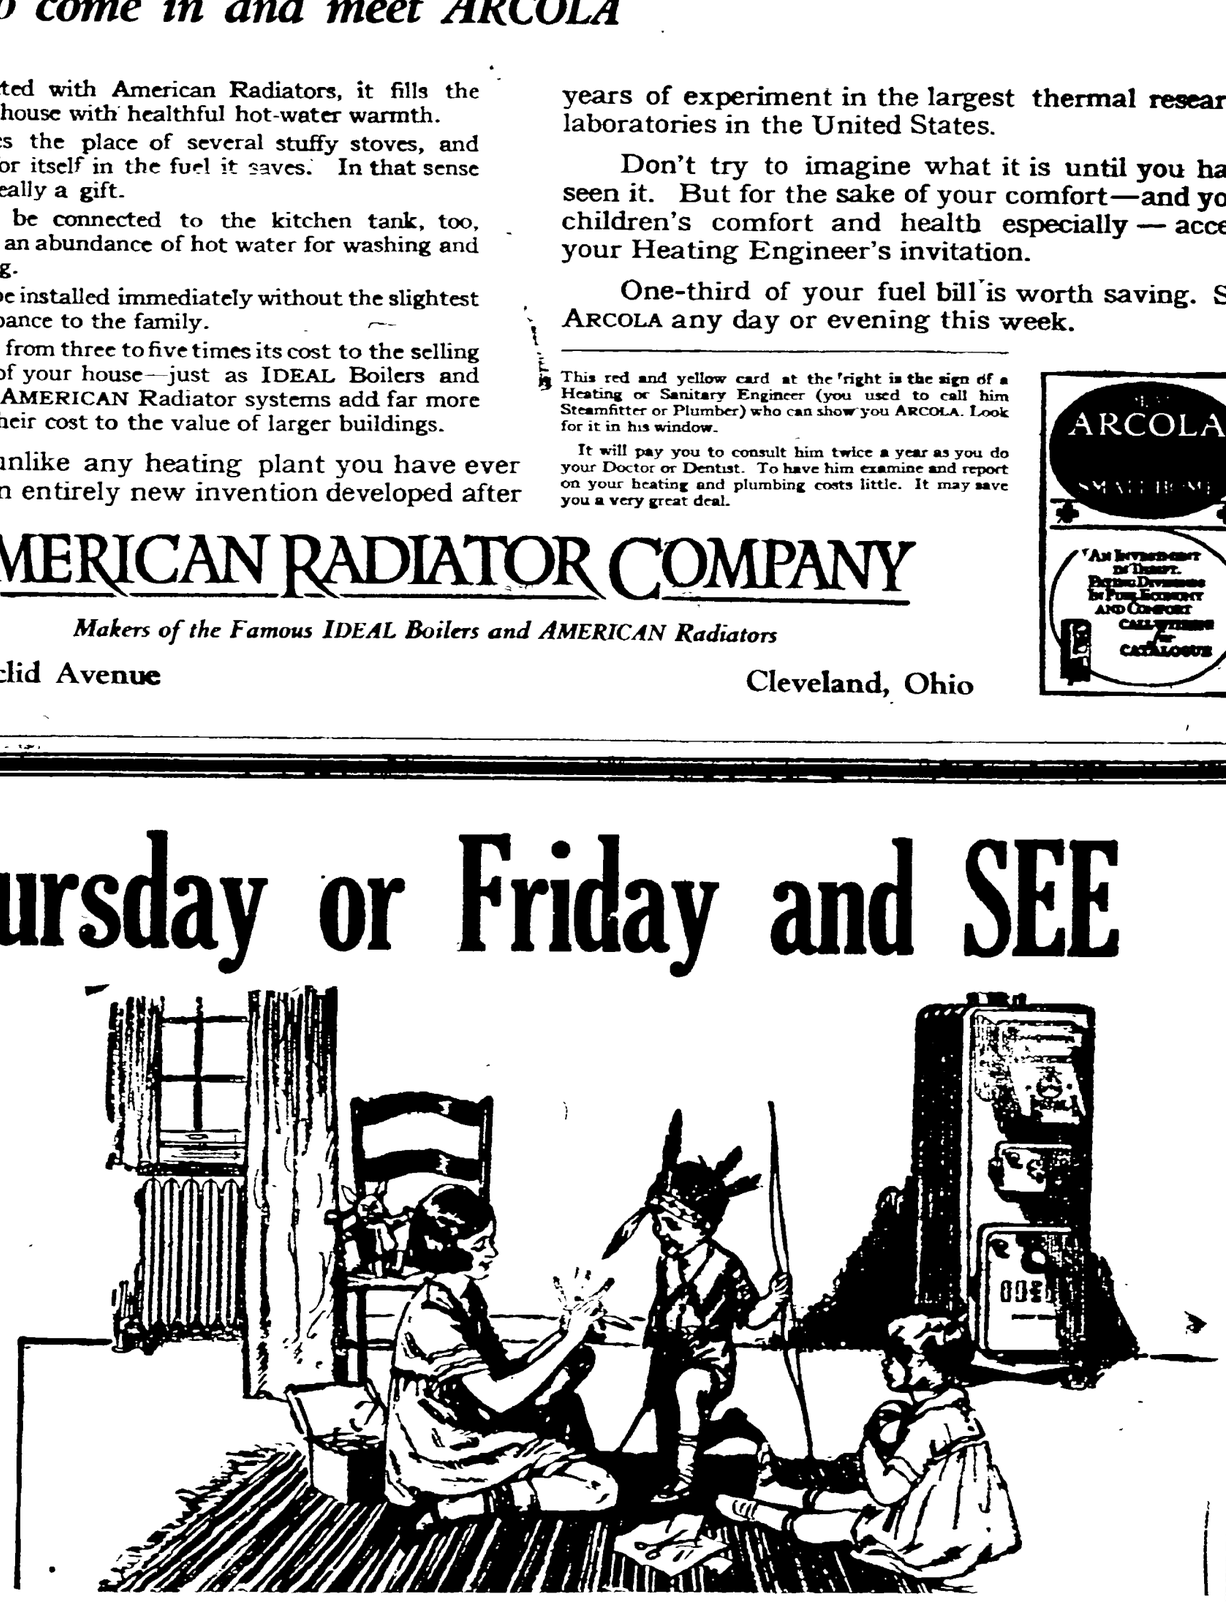

Makers of the Famous IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators

...Tomorrow at The Strand

...dog's work is over you would know it had been conscientiously done and your night's sleep would be sound.

Lois Webber has adapted the thought "What's Worth While" to the screen and it's NOT a sermon, but a picture of gripping heart interest from stem to stern, in which this producer-director has won fresh laurels. "What's Worth While?" will be shown at the Strand theater tomorrow. Claire Windsor and Louis Calhern have the leading roles.

'PAYING THE PIPER' STARTS AT COLONIAL THEATER TOMORROW

A wild debutante with a penchant for clothes of the most stunning kind—that is the role that Dorothy Dickson has in the Geo. Fitzmaurice production of "Paying the Piper," which comes to the Colonial theater tomorrow and in order to act the part convincingly, the actress wears a succession of gowns that constitute a veritable fashion show.

Among the costumes is a smart sports coats, a Chanel production that has only recently been sent over from Paris. It is a straight-line model, the material being a rough cloth of a dull rust color barred off in great squares with narrow lines of gray duvetyn couched in cross-stitch with black thread. Gray duvetyn is used for the high crush collar Lewis of Paris has made the hat that Miss Dickson wears with this coat, one of the off-the-face modified Napoleonic shapes with upturned brim formed of a fabric made with white baby ribbon run through rings cut from brilliant tin.

A navy serge frock is made attractive with inserts of silver lace placed in panels at the lower part of the straightline model. Among the numerous negligees is one of gray georgette with bands of gray fox and another of yellow georgette with red roses and lined in red georgette. An evening frock of chartreuse chiffon velvet, with an odly draped bouffany at the sides makes a youthful creation.

Music of all kinds being harmful to morality, the mayor of a certain town inFrance has ordered the suppression of all pianos and phonographs in his commune.

Agnes Conquers the Sheik

The masterful Sheik, cruel, domineering, harsh, as described by Edith M. Hull in her novel, "The Sheik," set out to subdue the wilful English girl. But she awakened eventually his tenderest emotions, and the masterful man became putty in her hands. As Rudolph Valentino and Agnes Ayres enact this Paramount picture the primitive emotions of the desert find an outlet on the screen in the most colorful picture George Melford ever directed.

Thousands of Deaths From Pneumonia Every Year Directly Traceable to Neglect of "Slight Cold."

Don't Take Chances—First Time You Sneeze Apply Nash's Salve to Nostrils and Avoid Taking Cold!

Some time when you have the opportunity, ask your doctor to tell you why colds are so dangerous and also why they are contagious. Then you will wonder why anyone deliberately allows a cold to "wear itself out." Many a strong constitution has given down under the strain, many a man, woman and child has gone to an untimely grave as a consequence.

Aside from the danger, colds make you feel bad, cause great inconvenience and loss of working hours. All for no reason either, for the new Nash Treatment will check and break a cold in a few hours as surely as this is written.

The Nash Treatment is so named because it calls for the use of Nash's Croup-Pneumonia Salve. In this marvelous discovery of Nash Brothers (Arkansas) is awarded the recognition of merit it deserves, for it is compounded of purest ingredients and is much stronger than imitations.

Colds are mankind's worst enemy; they are the forerunners of ills often incurable. Therefore, in perfecting a treatment for colds that can be used safely for children and adults without the use of drugs and medicines the makers have really accomplished much for humanity.

Unnecessary Colds.

At present a campaign is being conducted to teach as many as possible the fact that it is simply foolish to suffer from a cold. It is the object of this article to bring the Nash treatment to your attention as a safe, speedy and sure relief.

In the first place, a cold is usually the result of carelessness. There can be several causes, but chiefly among these is the lack of proper ventilation in homes, offices, schools, churches and other places where several of a similar character are breathing the same air over and over again. Here is where an ounce of preventative is worth a pound of cure.

Keep Mouth Closed.

People who breathe correctly, that is through the nose are less susceptable to colds. Nature has made certain arrangements to filter the air we breathe in that manner, but we lose this advantage if we allow ourselves to breathe with the mouth. Watch yourself as to this.

If you sneeze or have any reason to suspect the presence of cold germs, apply Nash's Salve in each nostril at once. As a rule this will positively forestall trouble. If the cold has secured a start before you realize it, heat a little of the salve in a spoon and inhale the vapors. Repeat at intervals, thus keeping the nasal passages open, and the cold will soon leave.

For a deep seated cold follow directions with each bottle. Relief can be had in one night with this treatment or you can get Nash's Salve in 30 and 60 cent bottles at most any drug store.

Ecclesiastes' Topic of Address

The first of a series of sermons was given by Dr. Neighbour, Sunday evening upon the Book of Ecclesiastes, which book, he said in his opening statement, is misquoted and misunderstood more than any other book in the Bible. "Infidels love to quote from it," he continued, "and in so doing, misjudge its real purpose and fail to recognize the true meaning and significance of the passages they quote."

Following are some of the statements named by Pastor Neighbour in developing his subject:

"The book was doubtless written by Solomon in his old age, after a life time of testing out the problems and pleasures of life and observing in detail the affairs of mankind. He was not only the wisest, but also the richest man in the history of the world, and not only that, but he was in a position of power and influence, a ruler among men and one who had the world at his feet.

"The twelve chapters of Ecclesiastes is his record of the impressions and conclusions that he reached in studying man. You will note, as you read the text of the book, the continual repetition of the phrase 'under the sun.' It is a key note of the thought that dominates the whole book and stamps it with a human touch rather than a divine. It is not the record of God's estimate of man, or God's purpose or plan with man, but rather the summing up of a man's own view of his fellowmen. As bearing out this fact, it is well to note that the God referred to in Ecclesiastes is always the Greek "Elohim" and never any other. Nothing points forward to the Cross; nothing to the Loving Father. In other words: The God of Ecclesiastes is the creative God, the same as in other religions. It is the same as Allah to the Mohammedan, the Great Spirit to the Indian. Solomon in all of his human wisdom was sizing up mankind as a great established fact and the matter of man's relation to God was only in a creative sense.

After all of the author's experiences in the paradise he had created for himself and amid the luxuries of life with which he had surrounded himself; after reveling in wealth and being the recipient of all the honors and powers that earth could give him, Solomon in his latter days was a near suicide. His "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity" became a great throbbing reality that threw him into despondency and desperation. The only thing that in his final test saved him, was his fear of God. In his latter days, after he had run the gamut of human experiences, he acknowledged as never before, the supremacy of God and the awful results of his own disobedience and wilfulness."

Next Sunday evening, Rev. Neighbour will take up the Book of Ecclesiastes in answering the question, "What does a man's labor profit him?"

PETERMAN-RESAR NUPTIALS

Last evening at half past seven at the home of Mr and Mrs. Irwin, on Fifth street, Irene Resar and J. Cameron Peterman, Jr., were united in marriage by Rev. E. B. Redhead. The bride and groom were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Irwin. The bride wore a gown of blue canton crepe and carried a beautiful bouquet of bride's roses. Ater the ceremony the bridal party motored to Cleveland to the Hollenden hotel for dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Peterman are both of this city but they will make their future home in Elmira, N. Y., where Mr. Peterman has accepted a position.

LADIES' AUXILIARY OF CANTONS

The Ladies' auxiliary of the Cantons at their meeting last night which was attended by twenty-five ladies, made arrangements for putting the Decoration of Chivalry on four ladies at Wellington, Nov. 5.

MR. AND MRS. TERRELL ENTERTAIN FOR COUSIN ABSENT FIFTY YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Terrell of Princeton avenue entertained at dinner, Sunday evening, in honor of their cousin, Mrs. Clara Hammett of Oakland, Cal., who is visiting at the home of her cousin, Ed. Terrell of Broad street.

Covers were laid for eleven at a table artistically decorated with yellow and white garden flowers. Mrs. Hammett, before her marriage was Miss Clara Finch of Eaton township. She has been away from Elyria and this vicinity for fifty years and finds many of her old school friends much changed. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Terrell, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Kerr and the former's mother, Mrs M. R. Kerr of Willard, Mrs. Lida Hunter and daughters, the Misses Lutretia and Lucretia of Cleveland and Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Terrell.

COMMUNITY SUNDAY SCHOOL TRAINING SCHOOL

The Elyria pastors, superintendents and other officials of Elyria Sunday schools will meet tonight at 7:30 in the Y. M. C. A. to discuss plans for the third year of the community training school for Sunday school teachers which will be started in Elyria and other cities in the country in the near future.

J. E. Jenkins of Oberlin will be present to address the meeting and outline the work for the year. Mr. Jenkins has had considerable experience along this line of work, having himself conducted similar training school in Jamestown, N. Y. and having been in close touch with the organized work in New York State.

DISTINGUISHED SPEAKERS ADDRESS MEN'S CLUB

The first fall meeting of the First Congregational Men's Club will be held in the Gate's room, Friday evening, October 21st, at 6 o'clock.

T. L. Moise, chairman of the meeting, has been fortunate in securing Dr. B. E. Chollette, a noted Orthopaedic Surgeon, of Toledo, and Mr. Ed. Kelsey, of the Toledo Railway and Light Company, who will talk on the subject, "Elyria's Best Claim to Fame," a topic which shoul be of great interest to all.

Because the speaker must take early trains, supper will be served at six o'clock instead of six-thirty as customary.

NEW OFFICERS OF MINISTERIAL ASS'N.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Elyria Ministerial Association, Monday, at the Y. M. C. A., the following were elected to office for the ensuing year: President, Rev. Paul Bourquin; vice-president, Rev. W. S. Smith; secretary and treasurer, Rev. J. H. Grant.

Preparations were completed for the annual Thanksgiving service. It will be held at the Church of Christ, Wednesday evening, November 23, at 7:45 o'clock. The preacher will be Rev. Paul Bourquin, pastor of Saint Paul's Evangelical church.

A committee of three—the officers of the association, were directed to confer with Mayor Jones relative to the observance of Armistice Day, November 11, on a city wide scale.

KING'S DAUGHTERS CLASS HAVE MASQUERADE PARTY

The ladies of the King's Daughters class of the Second Congregational church were very pleasantly entertained at a masquerade party at the home of Mrs. E. A. Wells, 165 Erie street, assisted by Mrs. John Ligget, Mrs. Forsythe and Mrs. A. E. Williams. There were twenty-four members and fourteen visitors present. The house was attractively decorated in keeping with the Hallowe'enseason. After a short business session light refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Carl Smith, 633 Lake avenue. Mrs. Harry Bearer and Mrs Burton will be assistant hostesses. At a late hour the guests departed thanking the hostesses for their fine hospitality.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HAS SUCCESSFUL RALLY

St. Paul's Christian Endeavor Rally proved a good success. The society had the pleasure of several addresses from former pastors of the church, namely:

Rev. G. W. Krause, Michigan.
Rev. N. Lehmann, Cincinnati.
Rev. Hallwach, Cleveland.

From the hearts of these men was given us, the universal benefits of a society and many interesting instances of the great work a Christian Endeavor can profitably experience. "Give the Lord the right of way" was the motto concluded from the meeting. The educational thoughts of the speakers together with the musical program, added great interest to the meeting, leaving the hearts of the young Christian workers flamed with energy and enthusiasm, in their future service for God.

HEAR INTERESTING TALKS AT CIVICS AND SOCIAL SERVICE MEETING

The Civics and Social Service department of the Women's Civic club met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Oscar Townsend on Ohio street. Mrs. S. A. Killoran and Mrs. H. C. Stevens were assistant hostesses. After the business session Miss Fern Smith gave as her part of the program a most interesting answer to the question as it appeared on the program, "What is Social Service?" She stated that reduced to its simplest terms social service is the act of being a good neighbor, and is nothing more than a practical application of the Golden Rule. Above all there must be no element of conscious superiority or condescension. She then presented an outline of the community unit system being tried at the present time in a part of Cincinnati.

After her talk the remainder of the afternoon was spent in listening to a report from Miss Miskel upon her work as the community nurse, and upon the organization of her clincs which are three, a prenatal clinic, baby clinic and tuberculosis clinic. The medical work at these clinics is conducted by the different doctors in town. Miss Miskell stated that she wished to have it understood that these clinics are for anyone in town who wishes nursing help and advice and not for anyone class or group of citizens.

FIRST CONGREGTIONAL CHURCH CIRCLES MEET

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.—Adv.

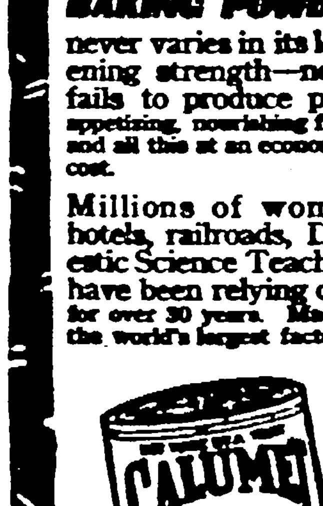

FOR BETTER BAKINGS

use Calumet Baking Powder. That's true of everything you make—one trial will convince you. Doughnuts, pies, cakes, biscuits, muffins, come from the oven light, tasty, sweet and wholesome because never varies in its leavening strength—never fails to produce pure, appetizing, nourishing foods, and all this at an economical cost.

Millions of women, hotels, railroads, Domestic Science Teachers, have been relying on it for over 30 years. Made in the world's largest factories.

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 oz. Some baking powders come in 12 oz. cans instead of 16 oz. cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.

Nervous, Overworked, Rundown People Need Evans Triple Phosphates

Never mind how shaky or timid and retiring your abused nerves have made you you can brace up, step lively, regain your old time ambition and confidence in just a few days by a short treatment of Evans' Triple Phosphates.

No matter what excesses have wrecked your nerves, Evans' Triple Phosphates are guaranteed to stop your trembling, to restore your confidence, to drive away forgetfulness and make your mind keen and alert, to change your sluggish disposition for a vigorous active one in two weeks or money back.

If you have worked too hard, lived too rapidly or have become weak, nervous and lost ambition because of late hours and too strenuous living, arouse yourself right now and get a package of Evans' Triple Phosphates at once. The beauty and glory of a healthy, vigorous body is something all men and women desire. It's within your reach. Why not have it? Harry A. Crandall and all good druggists can supply.

CAUTION: While Evans' Triple Phosphates accomplishes wonders in nervous digestive troubles and as a general nerve tonic, it should not be taken by anyone who objects to a few additional pounds of solid stay there flesh.—Advt.

Newest Fashions Expressed in Frocks sent us by

WORTH of NEW YORK

Among the delightful models which Worth of New York, has sent us this week, is the frock illustrated.

CANTON CREPE BLOUSED FROCK

Shown a few days ago in the Worth store where it met with the immediate and enthusiastic approval of New York women.

Shown to you today as an example of the New Mode as originated in Paris and worn in New York.

The bloused bodice is of peasant inspiration—the jet beads at neckline, bodice and sleeves a form of trimming newly returning to favor.

The tunic and uneven hemline are here a case of cause and effect—giving the appearance of complicated drapings with which Fashion likes to bewilder as she charms.

Newest modes—quality materials—careful workmanship—reasonable prices—all included in the new frocks sent us each week from Worth of New York.

"Two hundred." Robert Savarin put in as promptly, while I marvelled. He had said that he would bid only the value of the picture, as he estimated it. Was it possible?

"Three hundred dollars." The impatient voice of the wealthy collector held a note of finality, and there was no answering bid. The auctioneer awarded him the canvas, and in another minute the canvas of some other artist was held up, and Robert Savarin was escorting Lillian out of the hall, while Eleanor Rundle and I followed.

A Strange Question.

I think there were but few eyes in the room which were not focused upon the bizarrely-attired woman as she walked by my side out of the crowded place. Eyes of curiosity, eyes of envy, no doubt some eyes of genuine gladness at her good fortune. But I surmised that there were comparatively few of the last. She appeared too thoroughly self-centred, too selfish a woman to awaken much genuine concern for her welfare in the eyes of her associates.

That she was making a wonderful effort to appear composed, even nonchalant, I guessed from her erectly held body and her stride with its suspicion of a swagger. But her breathing betrayed the almost overwhelming excitement that was consuming her. Long shuddering breaths, almost sobs, which it seemed to me must tear her lungs, alarmed me. As we reached the door of the anteroom I put my hand lightly beneath her elbow, hurried her through the people standing there to the car, by by which Robert Savarin and Lillian were standing.

Lillian looked searchingly at her and spoke gently.

"Would you like us to drive you anywhere, Eleanor?" she asked gently. "I am afraid this has been too much for you."

Mrs. Rundle laughed a bit raucously, and gathered herself together.

"Don't you worry about me, Lil," she laughed. "I'm all right now, and I won't keep you. I must hurry back and see that auctioneer. I think I'd better instruct him not to take any bids under one hundred for my things. Don't you think so?" she appealed to Robert Savarin.

YOUR HEALTH

Why It's Silly to Say "I Fear a Hospital So!"

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Commissioner of Health, New York City

DR. COPELAND

THERE is a growing appreciation of the hospital and a recognition of its value to the community. There used to be a real dread of these establishments whose mission is to serve men, women and children when they are in direst need. Endless silly and cruel stories have made it difficult for some hospitals to live down the traditions of the dark ages of medicine and of men. But every wise man and woman now turns to a hospital with confidence and gratitude won by the services hospitals perform for humanity.

If there was ever a time when evil practices existed, they do not exist today. Under our law all hospitals are supervised by official and semi-official bodies. More than this, hospitals are directed by lay trustees, or by church agents who have no monetary interest in the operation of these philanthropies, but who are unselfishly serving humanity from pure love of the privilege. They are saturated with the zeal for public service.

For nearly thirty years I have had exceptional opportunities to know hospitals from the inside. I am sure I know the ideals and ambitions, the weaknesses and trials of the American hospital system. With this background of accurate information I desire to express my confidence and belief in our hospitals as agents for tremendous accomplishments for the public good.

I think of the housing conditions of our great cities with their overcrowding and lack of facilities for the care of the well, to say nothing of the sick. I think of the lack of training of the average man and woman so far as the care of sick persons is concerned. I think of the advances of science and of the apparatus and equipment for the diagnosis and treatment of disease.

Hospitals are the repositories of civilization's facilities and talent for the care of the sick. In this age of specialism you would not send a delicate watch to a blacksmith for repairs. You make use of the special talent required for the given job.

In repairing the broken-down human body, the hospital is the place above all others for the job.

Medicine and surgery have progressed to the point that the nurse transforms the sick room—when she is called to a private home—into a miniature hospital. In small and crowded houses this means that the whole household is upset. To give privacy, quiet and comfort to the invalid, all the rest of the family must be inconvenienced. This discomfort is cheerfully borne, but in most houses it is an unwise sacrifice, because the hospital would spare all this, and at the same time promote the safety, shorten the period of illness, and lessen the suffering of the patient.

In the hospital are nurses glad to serve you, and skilled in ways of doing so. Here are doctors at your command day and night. Here are dietitians and special cooks ready to provide for your slightest need. Here are the X-ray, the electrical apparatus, the delicate scientific machinery dedicated to the relief of human misery. And here are the quiet, the air of confidence and all the elements essential to speedy and complete recovery.

It is never convenient or comfortable to be sick. But if you are sick, the best place for you is the hospital.

Answers to Health Questions

MR. M. B. Q—How do tapeworms enter the body, and how can they be removed? When once removed, do they come back again?

A—Tapeworms enter the body in foods, especially meat. Diet and internal medication is the usual treatment. Unless the head of the worm is passed there is a recurrence of the trouble.

MISS A. W. Q—Kindly advise me what to do for chapped lips. Mine are always chapped the year around.

A—The use of camphor ice often cures this condition.

MR. J. B. Q—For many years I have had difficulty in breathing through my nose. First one nostril gets closed up, then the other gets that way. What is the cause of this condition?

A—You should be examined by a nose specialist. Your trouble may be due to a nasal deformity which should be corrected.

MR. M. P. Q—When I smoke a pipe I do not inhale, but when I smoke a cigarette I do inhale. Is inhaling harmful?

A—Yes, you should not inhale when smoking.

Good Night Stories

BETTY TAKES A PEEK INTO THE ISLAND OF FORMOSA.

BETTY leaned on her broom handle and gazed off across the hills. She wondered what was on the other side of the mountains and the tossing ocean.

"If I could, I'd fly away this very minute over the hills and the seas, and visit Formosa," she mused to herself.

"Nothing like trying to make your dreams come true," laughed a merry voice, and Gocomeback, the travel elfin, stepped up beside the astonished Betty.

He hopped on the broom and pulled Betty up beside him, and away they sailed over the hills and waters until they landed right on the very island Betty had longed to visit.

"The Dutch named this island when they owned it," said the elfin. "The name, Formosa, means beautiful."

Betty agreed with Gocomeback that the Dutch had given it the right name, for the mountain sides and valleys were covered with beautiful flowers.

"Formosa is noted for its beauty and the variety of flowers and vegetation," Gocomeback told Betty, but she scarcely heard, because of what she saw.

A densely wooded mountain extended the whole length of the island. To the east of the mountains the land fell down toward the ocean rather abruptly, forming great precipices. Some of them nearly a thousand feet high, so Gocomeback told Betty. The hillsides were green with tea plants, and they stopped to watch the natives preparing the crop for export.

"Japan certainly knew what she was about when she purchased Formosa," said Gocomeback. "For the day is not far off when Formosa may mean a great deal to Japan. Why, even now, the hillsides are covered with many camphor trees, where once their ancestors had grown, but had been cut down. The preparation and the exportation of camphor is an important industry."

He led Betty over into one of the villages where camphor was being made. The trees were first cut into small pieces and placed in tubes through which steam was forced.

"By this process," said Gocomeback, "the camphor is driven off as a vapor from the wood, like the steam from the spout of mama's teakettle. Then, as soon as the steam condenses in that large jar," pointing to a jar placed above the tube, "the crude camphor is removed and sent to the dealers."

The odor of the steaming camphor got into Betty's nose, and she closed her eyes and sneezed so hard that when she opened her eyes again she and Gocomeback were back into her own back yard. And when she picked herself up from the ground the elfin had disappeared.

Laughing merrily, Betty picked up her broom and went on with her sweeping.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT A Cynic at Seventeen

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

I HAVE a letter from Marietta and she asks for my advice, but not before she tells me exactly what she is going to do, anyway.

In the first page of her letter, Marietta is very sad and lonely. Nothing can ever comfort her, she declares. But about the third page of her epistle—I think a ten-page affair ought to be called an "epistle"—Marietta takes the view that she has become a cynic and will always remain a cynic from this, her seventeenth year, until she is as old as Methuseleh.

It is a sad story, the one which Marietta tells. It appears that her chum, Alberta, long time her best friend and boon companion, has deserted Marietta, and not only deserted her, but captured and is now holding in the fetters of an engagement of marriage, Albert, once the favorite and would be applicant for the hand of Marietta herself.

The two have left Marietta to her own devices, and now she is going to wreak revenge for the situation upon—herself.

Never will Marietta believe one word again from any human being, she says, and she contemplates going into retirement and becoming the bitter enemy of the entire race from this time forth.

Her hair is bobbed, she writes. Both Alberta and she herself, on the encouragement of the false and faithless Albert, bobbed their hair last spring. And now Marietta says she will wear her hair bobbed for the rest of her natural life. And she is going to dress in black—it's very becoming to her—and she will wear low-heeled shoes when those high-heeled ones she now has are worn out. She is never going to speak to Alberta as long as she lives, and to Albert she will only say a few cold words when she unavoidably meets him.

Don't Hate!

Often I have thought that to be a professional cynic at the ripe age of seventeen would be a rare delight. The attitude of the cynic is such a tribute to himself, or herself, and such a desperate affront to the rest of the world. It will make Albert and Alberta shake in their shoes to know the role adopted on their account by the deserted Marietta.

Come, Marietta, there are many things to hope for in the world, for you yet! One Albert cannot make a world, or one Alberta. From your photograph, which you kindly send me, I can see you will have many admirers of both sexes, if you do not carry your hatred of the world too far.

A Happy World

I believe if you could give yourself to the making of sponge cake, to be eaten at tea, with cream, and if you would once in a while wear a pale blue gown with pink roses and carry a feather fan, leaving off the black gown, you would feel almost as happy as if Albert and Alberta had never existed.

The fact is, Marietta, this is a happy world, with the happiness oozing out everywhere for girls of seventeen. You have no idea how hard it is to be unhappy and cynical when there are so many jolly things going on, and so much to do to make yourself and other people irrationally happy. It might not hurt you or any one else if you should be a cynic for, say, five or six weeks, but after that—away with the black gown and acid mien, dear girl, and on with gay colors and a dazzling smile!

Don't dally too long over the life of a cynic. But you will not, I am sure. It would be too tiresome.

FAMOUS "WITS" OF HISTORY

Little Stories of Men and Women Whose Sayings Are Still Remembered

By MARK STUYVESANT

The Way a Dog Got the Better of Genial Charles Lamb.

THE sweetness and charm of the author of "Essays of Elia," and his devotion to his sister, Mary, is one of the greatest tales of sacrifice in all the history of literature. Perhaps in Charles Lamb's helpless devotion to a dog is best seen his remarkable patience and kindness to everything that lived.

This dog was a large and very handsome creature, of no particular breed. His name was Dash. He came into Lamb's possession—more truly we should write that Lamb came into the dog's possession—characteristically enough, as a favor to a friend. This friend was Thomas Hood, the poet, who was a well-loved friend of the Lambs. Somehow, Lamb could not bring himself to accept the dog as his own property, so Dash came to live with Charles and Mary as some one paying a visit.

One of Lamb's delights was a long walk. He had a particular route which he followed because it gave him the chance to enjoy profound loneliness and absolute freedom. But the dog now went to walk with Lamb. For a time the gentle Charles thought of these walks with delight. But there came a day when Dash ran away, and Lamb spent all of his walking hours searching for him. Up hill down dale, in the lonely hills, and into all manner of streets of the town Lamb went, searching for Dash—always getting a fleeting glimpse of him at the very instant he was about to give up in despair.

Things came to such a pass that one day Charles and Mary Lamb appeared at the home of P. G. Patmore, who tells the story, with Dash frolicking ahead. They had walked the long way which separated the two houses to bring Dash for a momentous call. Mary Lamb begged:

"Please take Dash and keep him, if only out of charity. For if we keep him much longer he will be the death of Charles."

Patmore readily took charge of Dash, and soon discovered that the wild and wilful ways which had driven Lamb almost crazy were easily transformed by one who knew what dog decorum is. Dash subsided into one of the best bred and best behaved of dogs.

But Lamb did not forget. From another city he wrote in his whimsical way:

"Excuse my anxiety—but how is Dash? Are his intellects sound, or does he wander a little in his conversation? You cannot be too careful to watch the first symptoms of incoherence. The first illogical snarl he makes, to St. Luke's with him. All the dogs here are going mad if you believe the overseers, but I protest they seem to be very rational and collected. But nothing is so deceitful as mad people to those who are not used to them. Try him with hot water. If he won't lick it up it is a sign he does not like it.

"Does his tail wag horizontally or perpendicularly? That has decided the fate of many dogs in Enfield. Is his general deportment cheerful? I mean when he is pleased or otherwise there is no judging. You can't be too careful. Has he bit any of the children yet? If he has, have them shot, and keep him for curiosity, to see if it was the hydrophobia."

Dash Ran Away.

One of these children grew up to be the poet, Coventry Patmore.

"Did you notice how they are finished?" I asked.

"Yes," replied Nora. "They are bound with brown braid, which outlines the slits that form them."

"That's rather a good idea," I remarked.

"Yes," replied Nora, "it gives a bit more color to the skirt."

"How do you like the cape?" I questioned.

"Very much," I answered. "I think capes are far better for many occasions than coats. This one has a stunning collar."

"Yes, it's beaver, isn't it?" asked Nora, who is rather shortsighted.

"Yes, and it is a fine piece," I replied. "I like that brown binding about the cape," said Nora. "It makes an excellent finish, and, in fact, it adds an interesting note to the decoration of the costume."

"The vest of the same material appeals to me," was my next remark.

"It is good-looking," answered Nora. "I see it is one of those vests which fasten on the side."

"Then," said I, "I suppose you could wear any kind of blouse underneath it."

"Surely," answered Nora.

"That's quite a nice idea, for you might wear out your old waists, provided the sleeves and collar were in good condition," I remarked.

"Certainly, or, if you wished, you might substitute one of those guimpes with sleeves," said Nora.

"Yes, I suppose that would really be the better thing," I answered.

"That's what I should do," said Nora. "What are these guimpes made of?" I asked.

"Oh, you can have them in practically any material you like," answered Nora. "Just at present there are some stunning models in heavy satin. Sometimes the collar and cuffs are bound with color."

"That would be effective," I replied. "I should like one with brown bindings for this costume. Wouldn't you?"

"Yes, I think it would be pretty. And then the brown hat which she is wearing would carry out the color scheme perfectly," replied Nora.

"That's certainly a stunning creation. I should love to have one like it!" I said, as we entered the hotel.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

What a Little Daily Care Will Do to Keep Your Wardrobe Fine.

HOW few persons realize the necessity of keeping up their wardrobe is apparent by the number of semi-shabby people we meet in a day's travel.

One woman expresses the fact in this way. "I live with a brushbroom in one hand and a shoebrush in the other, and even then I don't always feel well-groomed."

It is appalling, also, how few parents impress upon their growing children the importance of caring for and keeping their wardrobes in order. It is a first step in economics, in stretching a small income to its fullest extent.

A man who prides himself upon being well-dressed said to me not long ago: "How is it your son's straw hat holds up so well through the season?" My answer was, "Because I taught him to brush it carefully with a soft whisk broom every day, just as he does his winter hats. Care pays." He said he never thought about brushing his straw hat.

This is but one instance of what care will do. If every man and woman would have the heels of their shoes straightened often, and keep the shoes polished according to their needs, the shoes would last twice as long. Shabby shoestrings or ribbons are inexcusable. Shoe-trees also help to keep the shoes shapely. Patent leather slippers or shoes, not worn constantly, should be kept in a flannel bag where it is dry and warm. Brushing them over with milk occasionally keeps them from cracking.

Overcoats and outdoor wraps should be thoroughly brushed, pockets turned out and brushed well, then properly pressed at least once a month, and they should be hung on frames. A square of cheesecloth or linen with a hole in the centre should be run over the frame to cover the shoulders of a garment, for dust resting on the shoulders makes the material turn rusty in appearance. No matter how clean the house may be, some dust is bound to fly.

Street suits should not be worn in the house by women. They should be slipped off and a house dress substituted as soon as the wearer comes in. Brushed and hung properly, they last twice as long and look a hundred per cent. better while they last. Little soft silk house dresses are suitable, and if made at home a sufficient variety may be kept on hand at small cost.

It is an astonishing fact what a help a rainy day suit can be in saving better things. A jacket and skirt of tweed, Scotch plaid or storm serge looks well if nicely tailored, sheds moisture, presses easily, and does not look out of place if the sun breaks forth during the shopping day. This also applies to a man's suit. It is suitable on a rainy day, or it may be worn in an emergency while other clothes are being pressed or repaired. Such clothes do not go out of fashion quickly, and last two or more years.

A shabby mackintosh is another eyesore in the wardrobe. These garments represent quite an outlay, and should receive good care. They should hang on frames or fold in drawers when not in use, and not be thrown down on a chair or carelessly hung, or be left in a wet heap. They cannot be pressed so must be cared for in other ways.

Dress suits and Tuxedo suits should be pressed once a month during the time they are not being worn. It helps to keep away moths, and preserves their shape.

Party dresses should be looked after carefully.

If clothing which is seldom worn is kept in order we shall not have to throw away or give away things which formerly were becoming and useful.

Wellington, Beautiful Village, With Hospitality, Thrift, Enterprise and Dairy Farms

WELLINGTON, Oct. 18.—There is no little village in this section of the Buckeye State that is more attractive, progressive and substantial than Wellington, which has been one of Lorain county's enterprising communities since it came into historical prominence in the late 50's because of the rescue of a fugitive slave from the hand of a United States marshal and two Kentuckians on his way to his southern owners. In later years it became one of the leading cheese centers of the country, and has developed into a clean, substantial and progressive village of about 2,500 people. It has a number of manufacturing plants, one of the strongest banks in Lorain county, a handsome town hall, modern water works, motorized fire department, electric light facilities, a well organized school system, five different church denominations and a large public library, donated by ex-Governor Herrick. The settlement of Wellington, or Center, dates back from the first influx of residents as early as 1818, but its standing as a leading center of trade in that immediate section of Lorain county began with the construction of the Big Four railroad. This line gave Wellington control of much of the southeastern part of the county and the permanent growth of the village, which was incorporated in 1855, was assured from that time and by that event.

While there has never been a "boom" period in Wellington it has gradually grown commercially and industrially and today it has plants of various kinds and the future of the village appears most optimistic. It has the distinction for the past several years as being the largest milk producing community in this section of Ohio and the largest number of blooded cows for any community its size in the country.

Since Wellington was incorporated, it has always been known as one of the principal milk sections. Years ago the product was manufactured into cheese and upon the passing of that industry the thousands of gallons of milk daily are shipped into Cleveland.

The outlying sections of Wellington abound with green fields with little elevation and great herds of fine bred cows browse upon the green carpets of nature.

In addition to the milk industry Wellington has many manufacturing plants, including a condensed milk factory, which has been operating constantly for the past several years and owing to the increase of business the plaint will be enlarged early next spring.

During the recent industrial depression the majority of industrial plants in the Wellington community operated. Some with a reduced number of employes but compared with some other towns in this section, Wellington continued to enjoy a fair share of commercial activity. There are scores of business houses and merchants report that considering the general industrial lull they have enjoyed good business. Owing to the Wellington community being a good farming section and the large milk industry, hard times have not affected the town as much as where a community depends entirely upon its industrial operations.

Wellington has a splendid Chamber of Commerce, headed by Col. James C. MacDermott, who has been the aggressive official of the organization since his return from overseas at the close of the World war. The town officials, with the Hon. Guy E. Wells, mayor, co-operate with the chamber, and as a result Wellington has, during the past few years, made much progress as a municipality and afforded the people of that entire community various kinds of free public entertainments.

The merchants of the town have the spirit of thrift and enterprise and the stores are up-to-date and it is asserted that there is no need for anyone to go out of town to buy merchandise. Owing to there being excellent farming sections in close proximity to the town proper, fresh products can be had for the table at low prices. The roads leading into Wellington are being improved. Large gangs of men are now engaged in putting the thoroughfares in excellent shape for the winter and it is assured that by the first fall of snow Wellington can be reached over good roads without any detours.

Officials of the Chamber of Commerce and the town predict that Wellington will see the greatest building boom in its history early next spring. They declare that there are scores of dwellings needed for workmen when the several industries resume operation with additional forces, while several prominent local men are contemplating erection of new business places.

VERMILION DEFEATS SOUTH AMHERST TEAM

VERMILION, Oct. 18.—The Vermilion high school football team won the first game since 1919 Saturday, from South Amherst. The V. H. S. squad played a far different game against South Amherst than against Dover Center, Friday Sept. 30. Although Vemilion won by score of 19 to 0 they did not play up to form. The three touchdowns were made by Thompson, Law and Moyer. This was South Amherst's first game and everyone will have to admit that they played a wonderful game.

Net Saturday the V. H. S. squad will play Amherst here. They are expecting a hard game.

Dover Defeats Western Tigers

The Western Tigers played the strong Dover football team at Dover and returned home with a 21 to 7 defeat chalked up against them. The game was a hard played one, with Dover getting all the breaks in the game.

State Game Farm at Wellington is Held Foremost in State

Superintendent Nash Congenial and Accomodating to Visitors---Only Farm of Its Kind In Ohio---Raised 6,400 Pheasants This Year for General Distribution

By Mrs. A. B. Curtiss

WELLINGTON, Oct. 18.—(Staff Special)—Few Lorain county people are aware that the only State Game farm in Ohio is right in their own county.

If you were to go three miles south of Wellington you would find a large farm completely surrounded with high wire netting.

If you would follow the cinder road which leads around the farm, you would see hundreds of tiny white coops all placed in rows, like rows of soldiers. The very well kept appearance of the farm makes one ask, "What farm is this?"

Upkeep by Hunters

It is the State Game Farm, kept up by the state from the tax of the hunter's license.

The superintendent of the farm is Thomas Nash, who lives with his family on the farm. Mr. Nash received his appointment by standing the highest in the civil service examination. His record and reports show that he is an excellent man for the state.

The farm is composed of 200 acres of land. Its biggest work is the raising of pheasants. The ringed neck pheasant is the kind that is mostly raised, although the farm raises several of the golden pheasants and a few of the Lady Amherst pheasants.

Raised 6400 Birds

The farm at present contains only 700 of the stock birds, which will raise the young birds this coming year. 6400 birds were raised and shipped to various parts of the state this year.

One will find on the farm a few deer and a few wild turkeys. All the grain for feeding is raised on the farm.

The pheasants raised are sent to different parts of the state and set free. A hunter who secures a pheasant is indeed lucky, for they are the sweetest, tenderest bird to eat.

It would be well worth the time for Lorain county folks to bring the whole family over to see the birds. The grounds are opened to the public and the pheasants are beautiful.

You will find Superintendent Nash an excellent gentleman to meet. His heart is in his work and he will be glad to answer any of the questions in regard to the farm which any one may wish to know.

STUDENTS WILL SPONSOR HIGH LYCEUM COURSE

AMHERST, Oct. 18.—As in former years the Lyceum course will be sponsored by the student senate of the high school. The talent secured is of the best and the four numbers will cost more than has ever been paid for five numbers. High quality entertainments are assured the public. The numbers in the order of their appearance are as follows.

November 12—Bell Ringing Quartet. Four cultured young men who present a brilliant entertaining but high-class program.

December 1.—D. Lee Fitzpatrick, lecturer. Former school teacher and editor. A definite message delivered in a heart to heart manner.

January 10—Kaier, magician. An evening of diversified entertainment.

February 3.—Chester R. Scott Company, a company of individual artists in a program of music.

RUSHING STREET PAVING AT AMHERST

AMHERST, Oct. 18.—The paving is progressing rapidly on all streets and from all indications the work will be finished before winter. The work is farther advanced here than in neighboring cities and with fair weather for a reasonable period of good weather no difficulty should be experienced in completing the work.

The concrete base has been laid on Cornell, Harris and North Main street and work was began on Lincoln street and the upper end of Park avenue today. The rough grading in Spring and Mill street is now completed and most of the grading on Park avenue is done. At some places dynamite was used yesterday in order to get out the dirt.

Take Yeast Vitamon Tablets To Put On "Stay-There" Flesh

And Increase Your Energy Quickly, Easily and Surely at Small Cost.

Nine out of every ten people working inside most of the time fail to get enough oxygen into their lungs or enough health-building nourishment from their foods, and as a result they become thin, sunken-cheeked, hollow-chested, run-down and underweight. Such folks will find this simple test well worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take Martin's VITAMON—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking Martin's VITAMON regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight and energy. Martin's VITAMON Tablets contain highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the two other still more important vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C), all of which Science says you must have to be strong, well and fully developed. They are now being used by thousands who appreciate their convenience, economy and quick results. By increasing the nourishing power of what you eat Martin's VITAMON Tablets supply just what your body needs to feed the shrunken tissues, strengthen internal organs, clear the skin and renew shattered nerve force without upsetting the stomach or causing gas. Pimples, boils and skin eruptions vanish as if by magic under their healthful, purifying influence. But it is not only a question of how much better you look and feel, or what your friends say and think—the scales and tape measure will tell their own story. A two weeks' test will surprise you.

If you want to quickly get more strength and vitality and have that firm flesh "pep" which makes you look and feel 100 per cent. better just try taking a little of Martin's yeast VITAMON with your meals for a short time and watch the truly amazing results.

IMPORTANT: While the amazing health-building value of Martin's VITAMON Tablets has been clearly and positively demonstrated in cases of lack of energy, nervous troubles, anemia, indigestion, constipation, skin eruptions, poor complexion and a generally weakened physical and mental condition, they should not be used by anyone who OBJECTS to having their weight increased to normal. Be sure to remember the name—Martin's VI-TA-MON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet—there is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Martin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists.

BREAKS LEG IN FOOTBALL GAME

AMHERST, Oct. 18.—Louis Solak, grade studen... suffered a broken leg in a football game at the school house during the noon hour yesterday. A group of boys who eat their dinner at the school grounds had chosen up sides for a foo.ball game. In the play Solak was thrown by a large boy and his leg doubled under him as he fell. During the dinner period of an hour and fifteen minutes the boys and girls are left to themselves for diversion.

Solak was taken to the hospital where the leg was found to be fractured between the knee and the hip. The boy was reported to be improving today.

AMHERST, Oct. 18. The school report cards will be passed out tomorrow for the first time this term.

Grafton Indians Defeat Lorain 11

LORAIN, Oct. 18. The Grafton Indians defeated the Grove A. C. in a hard fought game at the Oakwood park gridiron Sunday afternoon by a 7-0 score. The game was a veritable battle from beginning to end and contained spots of exceptionally good football as well as some bad spots.

The first quarter was scoreless, but the Indians seemed to have it well over the local warriors. The Grafton gridders wanted everything their own way during this part of the game and plowed through the Grove line by a series of tackle plays and line plunges. The ball was carried almost the entire length of the field and they were only stopped on the local's 25 yard line when the Groves intercepted a forward pass.

The Groves took no chances and immediately punted.

At the beginning of the second quarter Grafton started another march down the field. Their forward passes were working to perfection and a pass of S. Barden to Arndt put the ball on the Groves' 2 yard line. On the next play Barden bucked the ball over the line.

The Groves received the punt and gained steadily for a short time, but were stopped by superior defense of the Grafton organization. The half ended with the Groves' ball on the Indian's 40 yard line.

During the last half of the game the honors were about even, both teams losing several good chances to score by untimely fumbles.

Money Cannot Buy a Better Medicine Than

Our famous Cod Liver and Iron Vinol

For a hundred years the medicinal elements contained in the cod's liver and oil have been regarded as the safest and best strength and body building medicinal agents known.

Many people however—especially children—cannot take cod liver oil because of the nauseating oil.

In Vinol they get all the medicinal value of cod liver oil and emulsions in a delicious form and entirely free from oil—agreeable to the most delicate stomach—therefore it is better.

Vinol is better than anything you can take to create strength or end a cold because it contains not only the curative body building elements of cod liver oil (without oil), but glycerophosphates and vegetable iron—the three greatest tonics known—besides other valuable ingredients, all named on the label.

Read the wonderful testimonials we are publishing in this paper almost every day, then get a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee.

We agree to help you with Vinol or return your money.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
Lorain County Road Equipment Building.
Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the County Commissioners, Elyria, Ohio, until twelve o'clock Noon of the 9th day of November, 1921, for performing the labor and furnishing the materials necessary to the construction and completion of a County Road Equipment Building, to be located on county property, at the intersection of the Elyria-Oberlin Road and the B. & O. R. R., in Carlisle Township, Lorain County, Ohio, in accordance with the plans, specifications, descriptions, estimates of quantities now on file in the County Commissioners office, as prepared by Alfred Bates, Architect, Elyria Ohio.
Said bids or proposals will be received on two classes of construction—Brick and Cement Block.
Said plans, specifications, descriptions and estimates may be seen at the offices herein mentioned at any time during regular office hours from the date of this notice up to the time for receiving bids, and any one desiring may secure a copy thereof at said offices.
All bids must be addressed to the Board of Commissioners and delivered to the Clerk of said Board prior to 12 o'clock Noon, of the day specified, indorsed with the name of the bidder and marked "Proposal for Lorain County Road Equipment Building."
Each bid must contain the names of the parties making the same and all persons interested therein, and must be accompanied by a certified check on some solvent bank of Lorain County, Ohio, or United States money, in the sum of $900.00 conditioned for the satisfactory execution of a contract with bond equal to the contract price, to be approved by the said Board of Commissioners for the faithful performance within the time specified, in case the bid is accepted.
The Board of Commissioners reserves the right to select either one of the two types of construction, and to reject any or all bids should they deem it for the best interest of the County so to do.
By Order of The County Commissioners, Lorain County, Ohio.
By F. L. ELLENBERGER, Clerk.

BRIGHTON

BRIGHTON, Oct. 18.—There was a community meeting at the town hall Friday evening to consider the disbursement of the War Chest Fund. County Superintendent Seal and District Superintendent Mitchelson were present to explain the need of new equipment in the school.

C. D. Murray and family were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. McDaniel in New London. Mrs. Stocking remained for a week's visit.

Mrs. Mary Anderson has returned home after several weeks' visit with relatives at West Salem.

Mrs. Nina Hall, Mrs. Abbie Murray and Mrs. Gertrude Griggs went to Oberlin Thursday to receive instructions from the state demonstrator which they will endeavor to bring back to the ladies of the Farm Woman's Club here.

Several Brighton people attended the Fostoria Boys' Band concert in Wellington on Tuesday evening.

Frank Edwards suffered another stroke on Sunday and continues in a very serious condition.

The basement shower at the M. E. church on Tuesday afternoon was well attended and all enjoyed the time spent together. A short program consisting of music, readings and talks were given after which lunch was served. The ladies of the society are very grateful to all who so liberally contributed to the "shower."

Mrs. J. S. Jordan, Mrs. C. E. Fox and Miss Mary Turley of Wellington, were among the welcome guests.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Gill, John Jeffrey, Frank Jeffrey and family, Mrs. O. S. Coats and family, Fred Gillett and family and Miss Madeline Howe went to Wellington on Wednesday afternoon and took possession of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gill while they were away calling on friends in Clarksfield. They took with them well-filled baskets and a bounteous supper awaited Mr. and Mrs. Gill on their return. The occasion was in honor of Mrs. Gill's birthday. Was she surprised?

County Deputy F. H. Van Arsdale, of Columbia Station, visited Brighton on Tuesday evening.

ONCE UPON A TIME THERE WERE NO DOCTORS:

The Doctor Was Not Much Needed Until Folks Began to Break Nature's Laws.

Doctors Preach Prevention Is Better Than Cure.

Ninety per cent of all disease is preventable, so doctors say. Eat simple food, exercise wisely, sleep sufficiently, and—what is vitally important—make sure of the daily, regular, thorough elimination of body waste, and the chances are nine to one that you will keep well, work efficiently and enjoy life. Bowel elimination of food and tissue waste is all-important. But in case of irregularity, disordered or imperfect action do not make the common mistake of taking harsh, violently acting medicines, with the idea of forcing the bowels to act. Nature believes in mild methods. She responds best to persuasion.

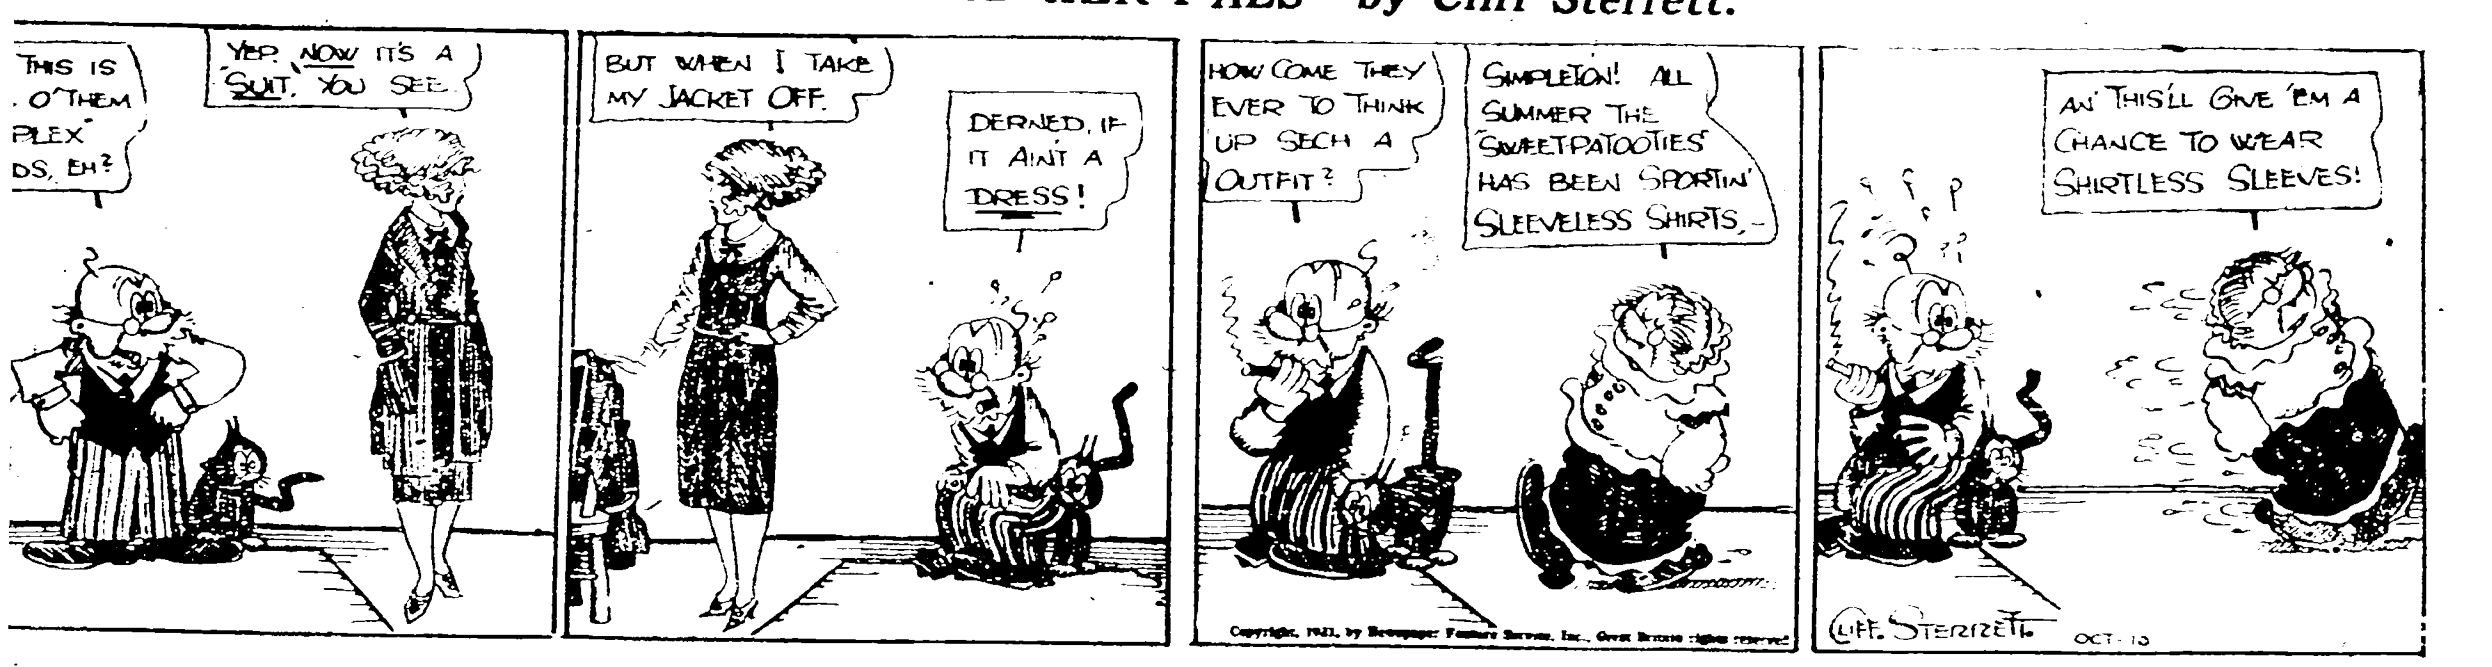

So in selecting a simple remedy to regulate and assure proper bowel action, you should not use harsh or violently acting remedies, no matter how much has been claimed for them. You should choose some well-known, time tested, trial proven remedy, that has made its reputation by being used for many years, by millions of people, all over the world. Take Beecham's Pills for example. Beecham's is a household word, has been for many generations. Beecham's Pills is a household remedy, has been for over half a century. People not only take Beecham's but recommend Beecham's to their friends. Their use is handed down from father to son or from mother to daughter, from one generation to another. Did you ever hear any complaint or criticism of Beecham's? Isn't that a pretty powerful endorsement of their worth? Druggists are glad to sell Beecham's.

FOR THE MAKING OF MOTHERS

Vassar College is endeavoring to raise a salary endowment fund of three million dollars.

At a luncheon of Vassar alumnae in New York last week Dr. Lyman Abbott, Editor of the Literary Digest, spoke. Among other things he said:

"Vassar does not send out women to become great lawyers, doctors, scientists, business administrators or money makers. It has been doing something much better than that. It has been educating women to be great mothers. We can estimate in dollars and cents the worth of a lawyer or a financier, but it is impossible to estimate the worth of a mother.

"It is Vassar's problem to send out into life mothers and teachers who are noble, heroic, and intelligent. I don't know how to raise money; I have never succeeded in it. But if I were working in this campaign I would say, 'Do you want a country of brave, courageous, sensible, intelligent mothers and teachers who know how to think? Vassar is turning them out. Help her.'"

We have not followed closely the work of Vassar College, but taking it from the language of Dr. Abbott, than whom there is no better authority, we express hope for the sake of Vassar's work and purpose, that she will obtain the goal which she seeks.

TOO EXTRAVAGANT

The women's suffrage leaders of Washington are greatly aroused. The Senate Library Committee caused to be erased an inscription from the "Suffrage Group" representing Lucreta Mott, Elizabeth Cady Standon and Susan B. Anthony, in the crypt of the Capitol.

This was the inscription they erased:

"The Three Great Destiny Characters
Of the World Whose Spiritual
Import and Historical
Significance transcend
That of all others of any country or any age."

We believe it would be exceedingly difficult to overestimate the valued service of the three women represented in this group, and referred to in this inscription, but devoted to the women's suffrage cause as we have been, as great admirers of the heroic leaders mentioned here as we have been, we believe that zeal and devotion lead to an extravagance in language which is hardly compatible with a lasting monument in such a place to command respect.

The suggestion that these three transcend in historical significance and spiritual import that of all others of any country or any age is certainly open to serious question in the minds of most people who believe that the granting of suffrage to women has been but one step in the enthronement of common people in the place of power for self government and self development.

TWO USES

The police of New York City are donning corsets. Ten of them have been ordered as a trial. No, they are not for looks. (You could not improve the looks of a New York policeman.) They are made of armor plate and they are bullet proof and are to be particularly used when the police go after prisoners who have barricaded themselves and who are ready to fire at the captors.

So it has reached the point in New York where the policemen are putting on armor plate corsets and the young ladies are having theirs checked when they attend a dance.

We could draw a parallel on these two striking features of New York society but we will leave that to the readers.

OHIO AND ILLITERACY

We should all be delighted with the fact that illiteracy is on the decline in Ohio. In 1920 there were only 131,000 persons in Ohio over 10 years of age unable to write in any language. There were only 28,000 who were native white of native parentage. 84,000 and more of these illiterates were of foreign birth. There is less illiteracy in the rural districts of Ohio than in the cities, the percentage being 2.2 in the rural and 3.2 in the city.

The general condition of illiteracy in Ohio is credited to the state, and the fact that we are progressing [illegible] pride to all citizens.

'King That Does Not Want a Throne

King Alexander refuses to return to his throne in Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia, and all persuasive powers used upon him are to no avail. Alexander fears the dislike of a few of his countrymen and prefers the pleasures of Paris and the comforts of peace in polite society to the nightmares of sovietism, republicanism of antidynasticism. Hence his decision to stay where he is in Gay Paree.

ACT QUICKLY

Do the right thing at the right time.

Act quickly in time of danger.

In time of kidney danger, Doan's Kidney Pills are most effective.

Plenty of Elyria evidence of their worth.

Mrs. H. C. McKinley, 231 East Sixth St., Elyria, says: "I was annoyed by sharp pains whenever I stooped. Washing or any kind work about the house becomes quite burdensome. My back was lame and weak and this made me feel pretty well tired out. Mornings I was worse than when I went to bed and my muscles were very stiff and sore. My kidneys were a little weak and acted too frequently. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills after I read about them. They made me feel much better. My back was strengthened and my kidneys again acted normally."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. McKinley had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advt.

Captain Acquitted

Captain Albert D. Randall, of New York, commander of the United States liner Hudson, who was vindicated by the U. S. Board of Steamboat Inspectors of the charge of having wilfully passed by a disabled motorboat containing three fishermen requiring assistance. Captain Randall had been suspended pending the board's decision. It was testified that the radio messages sent out by the Hudson were not sent out with the knowledge or consent of Captain Randall. The fishermen were rescued by another steamer seven hours after the Hudson had passed them by.

How MICHELIN has overcome the commonest causes of tire trouble

NUMBER 11

Driving in Trolley Tracks

Driving in trolley tracks is destructive to tires because the tires are thus distorted. Michelins suffer less than ordinary makes from this abuse because 1st—the extra thickness of the Michelin tread, and of the side wall near the tread, cushions the tire and minimizes distortion.

2nd—Michelins' unique body-construction reduces the effect of such distortion and flexing, even when it does occur as a result perhaps of under-inflation.

For greater service try a Michelin.
